

IS ADOPTION RIGHT FOR YOU?

Bringing home a new pet is an exciting decision, but it's also a lifelong commitment. Before adopting, take a moment to consider how a new dog or cat will fit into your family, home, and daily routine.

Questions to Consider Before Adopting

Your Home & Lifestyle

- Is your home suitable for the size and energy level of the pet you're considering?
- Do you rent, and if so, are pets allowed?
- Do you have a secure area for exercise and outdoor time?

Your Family

- How will children, roommates, or other family members adjust to a new pet?
- Do you currently have pets, and how might they react to a new companion?
- Does anyone in your household have allergies or other concerns related to pet ownership?

Your Time Commitment

- Can you provide daily exercise, training, playtime, and companionship?
- What arrangements will you make when traveling or working long hours?
- Are you prepared for the adjustment period as your new pet settles into your home?

Your Financial Responsibility

- Can you budget for food, veterinary care, vaccinations, grooming, and unexpected medical expenses?
- Are you prepared to care for your pet throughout its entire life?

Preparing for Your New Pet

Before bringing your new companion home, consider gathering essential supplies such as food and water bowls, a comfortable bed, toys, a collar and leash, identification tags, and any species-specific necessities. Creating a safe, welcoming environment will help your new pet adjust more comfortably.
